Had it not been for the opposition of the Berlin police the German capital might have become Spain's rival in the sport of bull fighting. A Spanish-German group intended to import a troupe of bull fighters and a number of fighting bulls from Spain. The permission of the authorities was asked to use the stadium in Grunewald, near Berlin, for the fights, which were to be held for one week during the summer.

Although French music hall and cabaret artists always are sure of applause if their verses taunt Lloyd George or the League of Nations, the word has gone out that under no condition must Americans be subjected to anything that will arouse the suspicion that they are regarded as foreigners. This edict, following that of the Prefective of Police a few weeks ago suggesting that the singers let up on Lloyd George for a while, has aroused much comment by French writers as to American susceptibility.

The keenest interpretation of the states.

The keenest interpretation of the at-titude of the average American tourist was published this week by the French humorist Clement Vautel, who insists: "Foreigners who come to our music halls pay no attention to what is being sung. They are more interested in what they see."

After writing letters to the police and her mother, telling of her intention to take her life because "the money is going too fast, and all hopes of finding another Prince have been abandoned through my affection for him," Mme. Gaillard called in a veterinary and requested him to kill the two animals. Then she laughingly suggested:

"And now give me an injection of morphine strong enough to kill," adding, when the veterinary refused, "Never mind, then: I'll take care of that."

Half an hour later she took a dozen packets of veronal. She was found between the bodies of her pets, lying upon a tiger skin spread on the bedroom floor, when the police arrived.

THE rare spectacle of a ball given under police protection was witnessed recently at Nuremberg. A crowd had assembled outside the Wittelsbach Hotel, where the party took place, and as the guests arrived they were received with cries of "Profiteers!"
"Usurers!" "Gluttons!" Furthermore the crowd, which evidently objected to balls being given at a time of general economic depres-sion and suffering, prevented sev-eral women guests from leaving their automobiles. Finally a patrol of twenty-five policemen arrived and guarded the ballroom, but the demonstrations of the angry crowd outside continued until morning.
